LAZINESS ROOT OF EVILS

All's Well That Ends Well Is The Most Costly of Mottos in the Home.

"All's well that ends well" is the most costly of mottos, declares the author of "Neighbors and Friends," who adds that in her daily rounds the district nurse becomes convinced that laziness, mental and bodily, is at the bottom of most of the evils of life.

Mothers repeatedly argue when remonstrated with for allowing girls in their teens to spend their time in idleness, "I can do the work myself, and when the time comes for it, they'll do the same." They do not recognize how much easier life would be for their children if they did not allow habits of laziness and selfishness to take deep root.

In the days when sewing formed a larger part of every woman's education and occupation than it does at present, a mother was reproached for allowing her daughter to spend so much time over embroidery. In defending herself, she said: "I have had her taught sewing, and whether she makes shirts or tea-cozies matters very little. What matters is the habit of industry. Provided she has that, she will always turn to any form of work that may be necessary."

It seems almost impossible for uneducated mothers to grasp the fact that although their children's assistance in the housework may be of little value, they must nevertheless exact it, and that the important point is the habit of industry, not the intrinsic worth of childish efforts. Even in the humblest forms of work it may truly be said: "Ease is the lovely result of forgotten toil."

SLIPPERS OF FUR, NOT GLASS

Cinderella's Footgear Transformed by the Mistake of Perrault Who Wrote Out the Fairy Tale.

When Perrault in the seventeenth century was writing his fairy tales to amuse the courtiers of France, he had recourse to the old French chronicles. Then he read that Cinderella, or whatever her name was in those days, went to the ball in slippers of "vair," the royal fur of that time—miniver, as it is now known. Perrault, misreading the text, decked out his heroine in slippers of verre (glass), a very different thing. The real Cinderella probably went to the dance in those pointed, curving, fur-bordered shoes of medieval days. But, thanks to Perrault, she will trip down the corridors of time in her little clattering glass slippers.

NONCOMMITAL.

Miss Prymme—Er, Gertrude, was it you I saw last night with a man's arm around your waist, or did my eyes deceive me?

Pert Minx—Well, really, I don't see that I am called upon to be answerable for anything on the evidence of your eyesight!

WOMEN HELP NEW ORLEANS.

Miss Kate M. Gordon, speaking in Philadelphia recently, says that most of the reforms in New Orleans may be traced directly to the influence of women. The new constitution of Louisiana gives women the right to vote in person or by proxy on all questions affecting taxation. The exercise of this right in New Orleans, Miss Gordon said, had resulted in obtaining superior water, drainage and sewerage systems. Every civic reform that has been carried out in New Orleans for several years, she said, had found its inception in the women's clubs.

THOSE GIRLS.

She—Ethel? I hate her!
He—Why, I saw you kiss her yesterday.
She—Yes, but that's all we hardly speak!

BUILT A FORT IN CANADA

Feeble Blunder That Was Made by the United States Government After the War of 1812.

It is not generally known that our government once undertook to erect a fort on British soil. The site of this fort, afterward called Fort Montgomery, was about half a mile northeast of Rouse's Point, N. Y., not far from the foot of Lake Champlain. Popularly it was known as "Fort Blunder." It appears that after the war of 1812 our government felt the necessity of guarding the entrance to Lake Champlain. Accordingly in 1815 was begun the erection of Fort Montgomery. The original notion was to construct a great fort. In those days that meant a fort with three tiers of guns.

When the work had been in hand for some time it was discovered that owing to an error of early surveyors the actual boundary between New York and Canada, the forty-fifth parallel of north latitude, passed south of the fort. Work on the fort was suspended for about 25 years, and not until the year 1842 was the territory restored to the United States. The agreement known as the Webster-Ashburton treaty, establishing the northwestern boundary, made the line between New York and Canada conform to the old and incorrect early survey. Thus "Fort Blunder" was again on United States territory. The people of Maine, it is said, never quite forgave Daniel Webster for giving up, as they claimed he did, a great slice of territory to which they thought themselves entitled in order to save Rouse's Point.

After the boundary question was settled the fort was finished, but it was never manned by more than sufficient men to keep it in order, and it was never armed.—Harper's Weekly.

NOVEL USE OF CORKS.

Charles Hawkins of Peterborough, England, has succeeded in building a series of most interesting models, the chief of which is a large and comprehensive model of Burghley house, the historic seat of the marquis of Exeter, near Stamford.

It took Mr. Hawkins, in his spare time, ten years to complete, during which time he walked nearly 3,000 miles in repeated visits to the house in order to secure accuracy. The model measures five feet in length, four feet in width and three feet in height, and no fewer than half a million bottle corks were used in its construction.—Strand.

CAUGHT MONSTER GAR.

Thomas Q. Pringle, while fishing with George Dohr in Deer creek, near Mount Sterling recently, pulled out a monster gar three feet long. Mr. Pringle slashed off the head from the long, snakelike body and preserved it, as it is a decided curiosity, a gar of that length not having been taken on a hook in that vicinity for years.

The cruel jaws with the needle-like teeth are about four inches long and the coloring of the head is most beautiful. It is a light gray or silver and is handsomely tinted with purple slashes throughout.—Columbus Dispatch.

PLANKS 50 FEET LONG.

Employees on the Lehigh canal on Wednesday unloaded a carload of white pine plank in the Central railroad yard at Weissport, each plank having the great length of 50 feet and every plank without a knot. These are the kind of planks out of which canal boats are built at the Weissport yard. They came all the way from Seattle, Wash., and it is said that the freight on the car is $400.—Philadelphia Record.

INEXPENSIVE.

"I wonder why it is so easy for a poor man to get to heaven?"
"Probably because the trip isn't made in a taxicab."

A RECIPE.

"He says he has lost his grip."
"Well, has he advertised and offered a reward?"
"No; he's reading cheer-up verse."
